CONCEDES BIG TRUST TO BE HIS OFFSPRING

Attorney Parsons Assumes Responsibility For Sugar Trust.

SAW CHAOTIC STATE OF TRADE

Called Havemeyer Brothers Into Conference and Outlined Big Combine of Saccharine Interests—Says Many Sought to Claim Credit For Organization Until Its Methods Came Under Government Supervision, When All Took to Their Heels.

New York, July 21.—John E. Parsons, white-haired Wall street attorney, insisted to the members of the Hardwick congressional committee that the public had been absolutely wrong in attributing the organization of the sugar trust to H. O. Havemeyer, now dead, claiming that he himself was parent of the combine, and was proud of the fact.

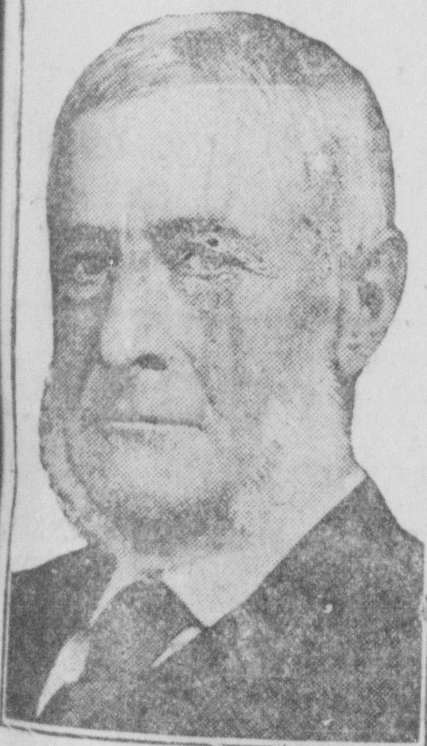

Parsons is under indictment in connection with the gobbling up of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refining company by the trust.

"I organized the sugar combine and I am proud of it," impressively declared Parsons on the stand. "For seven years I worked out the problem. The fact that the sugar trade was absolutely demoralized was brought to my attention by developments in Washington and after I worked out the plan to combine the warring elements I brought H. O. Havemeyer and Theodore, his brother, into the scheme and we put it through."

Parsons told the committee that in the old days every director and official of the sugar trust wanted to have the public consider him as the real brains of the organization. "But when we began to be criticised for our business methods," he said, "every single one of them ran to cover."

TRIES TO PASS FARM WAGON

Blue Rivers, Wis., July 21.—While endeavoring to pass a farm wagon, Louis Strang, the noted auto race driver, was instantly killed. His machine careened and went crashing over a high embankment.

Strang accompanied the technical committee of the Wisconsin Automobile association on its annual reliability run, which started Monday morning at Milwaukee, and occupying the car with him were J. W. Tufts, Milwaukee; Lester A. Clark, Lancaster, and Joe Jaggersberger, a Case driver, who acted as mechanic. When the machine began to leave the road the three jumped and escaped injury. All deny that the car was going at a hot speed, but agreed that Strang seemed exceptionally careful to avoid an accident.

A farmer's wagon was going in the same direction and it was when Strang turned out to pass it that the accident which caused his death took place. Strang, it is said, had not fully recovered the strength of his arm, which he broke in an automobile race in Kenosha June 18, when his machine went through a fence, and he also dislocated his arm, suffering internal injuries. It was also said that he was morose, following the divorce his wife had secured from him some time ago.

Companions Recover Body.

The body was recovered by Jaggersberger, with the assistance of several farmers, and when he had satisfied himself that Strang was beyond help Jaggersberger cried like a child and repeated again and again, "I can hardly realize that Louis is dead." He remained behind to look after the funeral arrangements of his friend, and later commented: "At Indianapolis I was spilled out going 85 miles an hour and escaped without a scratch, and here is poor Louis killed in a reliability run in which he is not even a competitor."

Scale Agreement Ratified

Miners and Operators in Crooksville Field In Perfect Harmony.

Zanesville, O., July 21.—A conference of coal operators and miners of the Crooksville district, in session here, voted to continue under the compromise scale of last November until April, 1912. The scale is an increase of 5.55 cents over the 1908 scale. Work was suspended in April, 1910, pending the formulating of a new scale. In November, 1910, the compromise scale was reached and work resumed.

STATE FAIR TO TREAT THE SONS OF FARMERS

State Fair This Year Will Offer Them Unrivalled Opportunities.

Columbus, O., July 21.—Free trips to the Ohio state fair, to last an entire week, will be given a large number of Ohio farmer boys, under a plan presented to the Ohio state board of agriculture by A. P. Sandles, its secretary.

Sandles' plan is for farmer organizations or institutes in every county to select one or two farmer boys, on a basis of merit, to be the guest of the state board during the fair. Arriving in Columbus, the boys will be organized into companies by officers furnished by Adjutant General Weybrecht and a military camp established on the fair grounds.

Each boy will be expected to work four hours a day on the grounds to pay his expenses, but the rest of the time he can be taking in the sights. One of the requirements, however, will be that each boy take notes during his stay and on his return home write a paper on the state fair and read it at a farmers' meeting in his county.

UNITED STATES SENATE PASSES THE "LAPDOG" BILL A DAY OF BIG BUSINESS

Rest of Day Spent to Discussion of Reciprocity.

Washington, July 21.—In the senate several notable speeches were made on the subject of Canadian reciprocity.

Senator Jones, Washington, Republican, advocated the passage of the bill. Senator Bailey of Texas opposed it, and Senator Smith, Democrat, of South Carolina, replied to Mr. Bailey, giving his reasons why Democrats would support the measure. Senator Heyburn closed the debate in opposition to the bill. The senate was continually in session for eight hours.

The bill amending the Payne-Adams tariff act permitting the admission into the United States of domestic animals taken out temporarily by their owners without the imposition of duty, was passed. The bill has come to be known as the "lapdog" bill and has already passed the house.

women as could be found were taken aboard the steam yacht, and her owner announced that he would use the rapid-fire guns on the craft in defense of the refugees, if it became necessary, pending the arrival of an American warship. Mr. Dick cabled to the Washington authorities asking to be released from a bond he had given before leaving New York that he would not use the weapons with which the American was equipped in Haitian waters, and when he received a reply saying that such permission or release could not be granted, he decided to run the risk of getting into difficulty with his own government and sent word to the American colony that he would go the limit in protecting their lives and property. The situation is very grave.

Wiley Boosted By Editors

Detroit, July 21.—The National Press association adopted resolutions endorsing the administration of Dr. H. W. Wiley, pure food expert, and opposing the enactment of legislation granting penny postage. The latter, it was declared, would be a serious blow to the parcels post.

TALKS WITH HIS SWEETHEART

Party Line Subscribers Listened and Tipped Police.

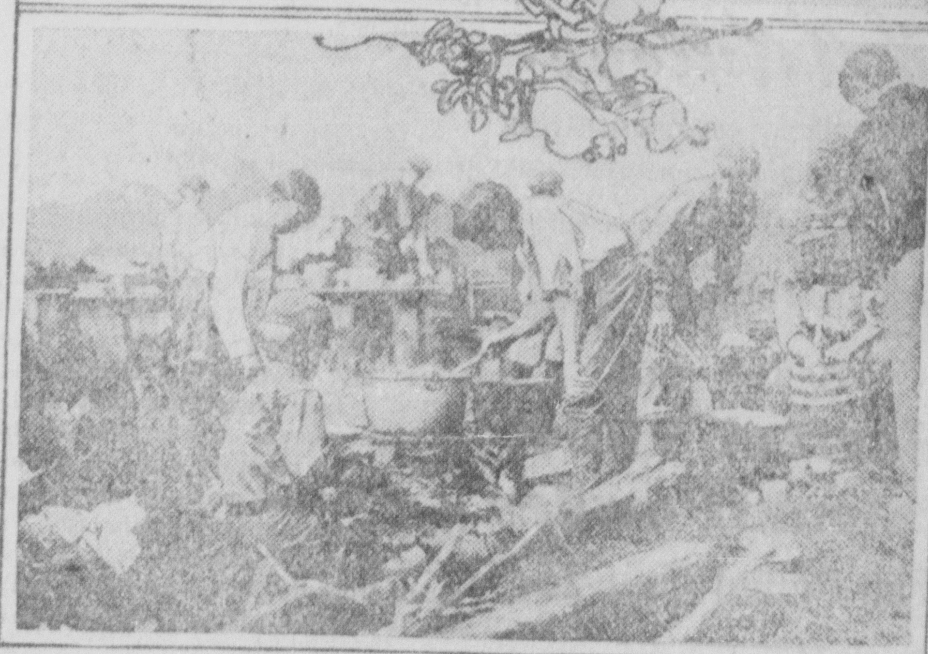

Talking to his sweetheart in Huntington, W. Va., caused the arrest of C. H. Davis, alias, J. R. Twigg, alias Ernest Sherman in this city late Thursday evening, upon a call from Chief of Police Davis, of Huntington, W. Va., where Davis, who is 25 years of age, is wanted for forgery, five warrants awaiting him there.

Twigg-Sherman-Davis arrived in this city on July 12th, registered at the Arlington Hotel as C. H. Davis, was assigned to Room No. 20, and commenced work for a local contractor, as a carpenter. He was fairly well dressed, 25 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches tall, dark hair, grey eyes, and weighs about 155 pounds.

Tuesday night Davis used the long distance phone, calling his sweetheart in Huntington, W. Va., it is claimed, and the police at that place learned of the conversation through subscribers of the party line over which the girl talked from her home, and communicated with Chief De-

Boy Scouts Now Number 150,000, With 350,000 More Applicants

Photos by American Press Association.

ESTIMATES recently made place the number of boy scouts in America at 150,000, and applications have been received from 350,000 other lads who wish to become members. The movement has grown faster than the originators expected—indeed, it has grown faster than was desired—and it has been found impossible to keep the machinery ahead of the organization. At the national headquarters in New York literature is being prepared modeled on that issued by the English organization, and the coming winter agents will be placed in the field to complete the local organizations that have been established in more than 300 cities and towns. Every state and territory is represented. Some time ago it was announced that the first national encampment was to be held at Otsego lake, near Cooperstown, N. Y., July 12 to 18. This encampment has not had the support of the national organization because of the danger that would follow the assembling of a large number of boys in one camp. The national officers believe that better results will be held by local encampments. The upper one of the pictures printed above shows a group of boy scouts who "hiked" from Troy to New York, camping outdoors on the journey. The other photograph shows the boys in camp.

Former Senator Denies President Backed Lorimer to Win.

FARM HOUSE ROBBED IN THE BROAD LIGHT OF DAY BLOODHOUNDS GET TRAIL

Jefferson township residents, north of Jeffersonville, were treated to a little excitement late Wednesday evening when the Williams-Day bloodhounds were called to the residence of Jesse Hoppes to trail three men who broke into the Hoppes residence and after helping themselves to what they wanted to eat, robbed two small savings banks of about $10 in cash, and made their get-away.

Mr. Hoppes did not discover the burglary until after four o'clock, and he summoned the blood hounds immediately. When the dogs arrived they picked up the trail and followed it to the railroad and north on the railroad to a point about one mile from the Hoppes residence, where they encountered a gang of section men who informed Losson Day, keeper of the dogs, that three men had passed them headed toward South Solon.

As the dogs had done their part, they were withdrawn and the telephone brought into use, but some miscalculation resulted and the men made their escape and have not been heard from.

They were supposed to have been a party of strangers, who were out of funds and tramping the roads.

The Boy Scouts Land Pickpocket Refuse a Reward

Rounding up a boy who had stolen a pocketbook containing $5 from a woman at the grocers' picnic at Olen-tangy Park, Columbus, Wednesday, and then refusing to accept $3 reward, was the unusual stand taken by members of Troop 17 of the Boy Scouts, according to a story told by Scoutmaster Mark Thompson yesterday.

Finding herself minus her pocket-book, the woman called several of the scouts to her assistance. After rounding up no less than 12 youngsters who answered to the description the pocketbook was finally located and restored to its owner. "The scout law forbids us to take any reward," said the lads, smilingly refusing the proffered reward of $3.

Mr. Twigg-Sherman-Davis

vancey, stating that Davis was wanted upon five charges of forgery, where he was located, and to arrest him immediately.

About seven o'clock Thursday evening Chief Devaney went to the Arlington Hotel, found Davis in the lobby smoking a cigar, and placed him under arrest. He was taken to the County Jail and locked up, after the contents of his pockets had been removed and he had been given a sweating out.

Davis stated emphatically that he was the wrong man, and that there was some mistake. He said he called a woman who runs a boarding house in Chillicothe, asking her about a ring he had left with her.

Upon his person was a letter written by a friend, and it was evident from the tone of the letter that Davis had left Huntington on the double quick, and that he had been in Portsmouth, Chillicothe and probably other cities before he came here.

He sent a telegram to a brother-in-law in Washington, D. C., asking for assistance, but did not fail to state that he was arrested here under the name of J. ... Twigg, but had registered here by his real name of Davis.

Davis is still confined in the county jail, and is very anxious to escape before the police from Huntington arrive. He is regarded by the local authorities as a pretty smooth individual, and it is believed that this is not the first time he has been in trouble, as that fact is clearly indicated by the letter he had in his possession.

Davis received two telegrams Friday, one from Lizzie Davis, of Huntington, W. Va., which reads: "Come to Portsmouth and meet me. Will leave Monday P. M. Answer at once." This is from the woman supposed to be his wife.

The other was from a friend by the name of C. A. Hughes, and reads: "Clarence send ticket at once. Lizzie ready to come. Answer. Hughes."

It is evident that Davis' wife, sweetheart, or sister was to come to him here.

Chief of Police Devaney received notification that Chief Davis, of Huntington, W. Va., had applied for extradition papers and would be here after his prisoner perhaps this afternoon.

Police! Police! Who Wants a Job?

Chief Devaney is in a quandary. He is looking for men for special police duty tomorrow during the show. It's an all day's job and the pay is good, but special policemen are as scarce as the proverbial "hen teeth". It will require three or four extra men to insure perfect order, and to handle any unexpected trouble that might arise, but these men cannot be found.

Any man who believes he is capable of handling a club (swinging it, for no trouble is anticipated), wearing a star and looking stern and self-confident and important, should call the chief at once before he is attacked with nervous prostration. He has both phones and is anxious to hear from prospective cops.

Local Men Inspecting Lands Of the Canucks

A. L. West, of the Luse Land and Development Company, accompanied by Judge A. C. Patton and Frank McCormick of this city, are spending a few days in the Houghton Lake district, Saskatchewan, Canada. They will return home next Wednesday.

This is claimed to be one of the wheat districts of northwestern Canada and is being rapidly settled up by farmers from the United States and Europe. Last year some 100,000 farmers located in Canada being drawn there by the reputed cheapness and fertility of the land. The father and mother of J. H. Hicks, the local architect, live on a farm in Saskatchewan. They visited their son in this city not long ago enroute to their former home in Pittsburgh. They are now planning to return to their Canadian home, claiming their health is much better there.

Education Foo of Quack Doctor

GRAFT plays in partnership with ignorance. That is, perhaps, the reason for grafters playing upon children. Education and legislation have done away with most varieties of fake doctors, but a certain type that still flourishes is composed of those who trade on unsophisticated susceptibilities of young men passing through the adolescent period. He usually styles himself "professor" and has a "cure all" for every disease known to mankind, and many that are not.

But it is not so easy to catch those who stay within the limits of the law, and it is this kind who usually are most contemptible and least scrupulous of that parasitic class. Knowing well the susceptibilities of the youthful mind to fear, its ignorance of hygienic laws and the false modesty of parents in failing to instruct the children in vital facts concerning coming manhood or womanhood, the quack skillfully intills his victim's mind with fear of dread disease which can only be avoided or cured by taking some imagined treatment.

If a city boy, he probably goes into one of the so-called science museums wherein are displayed wax figures of persons afflicted with horrible diseases. Rarely does the boy fail to be taken in. The costly medicines, instruments, and doctor bills soon eat away his savings. When he has borrowed to the limit and if he will not steal the alleged doctor tells him he is cured. But never until he is certain that his patient cannot pay any more. Country boys, however, offer most of the dupes, and these are the best payers, averaging about two to three hundred dollars apiece.

If he inquires further a carefully worded reply invites him to the city offices for a personal examination, but a question form is inclosed in case the young man cannot attend in person. The treatment by mail begins, but all correspondence is kept within technical limits of the law, and only rarely is the "company" sued, even when the victim knows he has been cheated owing to the nature of the case.

But this last "easy money game" of the quack is about played out. Not because of adverse laws, because laws can sometimes be evaded, but by the elimination of the factor that makes this graft possible, namely, ignorance.

Blowser—"I sold my airship this morning."
Blinks—"Why so? Thought you liked it."

Blowser—"It did not suit. Law says it must carry a light at night. The whole town comes out to see me land, and thinks I have been drinking if I do not land it steady late at night."—Judge.

In Social Circles

Of exceptional charm, and enlivening a quiet social season, have been a series of "Victrola Recitals" with which Mrs. H. B. Dahl has entertained a hundred and fifty matrons and girls the past week.

The third of the series was given this afternoon. The beautiful Dahl home, with its wide center hall and spacious connecting rooms, so perfectly adapted to generous entertaining, was redolent with summer flowers, a yellow color scheme being artistically employed.

The wide verandahs, with their trailing window boxes and overlooking the effective landscape gardening of the lawn, were also alluring and drew many of the guests.

The affairs were all marked by a delightful informality encouraged by the spontaneous hospitality of the gracious hostess.

Mrs. Dahl has an unusually choice collection of records, including such artists as Melba, Tetrazzini, Caruso, Schuman-Henik, Evan Williams, and the Victrola program presented was a rare treat, including in admirable arrangement vocal, instrumental and novelty selections.

At its close a refreshing summer collation was served.

Assisting in the hospitalities were Mesdames D. S. Craig, Ray Maynard, and George Hitchcock, Misses Fanny, Charlotte, Nina and Mary Dahl and Virginia Campbell.

Miss Marie Dale entertained Thursday evening with a delightful little lawn party in honor of her guests, Miss Marie Boultillier, of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Josephine McMullen of Hillsboro.

Music, games and delicious refreshments contributed to the pleasure of the evening.

The Ladies of the Maccabees gave a handkerchief shower Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Jennie Marks on East Temple street, in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Marks and Mrs. Willa Sollars, and was planned as a surprise to these ladies. Dainty refreshments were served, and the evening was spent in pleasant conversation, at 9:30 the ladies bid the hostesses good night, wishing them many happy returns of the day.

The Herald Quickly Finds the Answer

If a person has a really meritorious proposition to offer the public, no matter what it may be, an advertisement in THE HERALD will bring results certain and sure.

The truth of this assertion was very forcibly demonstrated this morning. Mr. George Bybee in last night's paper offered for rent the Wikle property on East Market street, calling attention to the number of rooms, condition of the property, fruit, water, barn, etc.

This morning Mr. Bybee found advertising a paying business, when nearly a dozen people, in answer to the little, insignificant-looking classified advertisement, called on him to rent the property. Although there are quite a number of empty houses in town, Mr. Bybee found to his satisfaction that vacant houses can be rented if the matter is made known to the public through the modern HERALD classified column. He quickly closed the deal.

ANOTHER FAYETTE COUNTIAN MAKES GOOD IN THE WEST PRESIDENT OF CONFERENCE

Another former Fayette countian has made good in the West.

Rev. James McCord, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McCord, living at the Coal Camp grounds and brother of Prof. Jesse McCord, is now located at Kansas City. For a number of years Mr. McCord was a teacher in Fayette county. Later he became a Methodist Protestant minister, preaching at several places in Ohio. Several years ago he went to Kansas

City, where he was given an appointment as pastor of a Kansas City M. P. church, and for the past three years he has been president of the Missouri Methodist Protestant conference. He is a trustee and a member of the executive committee of the Kansas City University.

Rev. McCord has been spending a few days with his parents here en route home from Boston, where he was a delegate to the Christian Endeavor convention.

The Market Street Sewer Work Progressing Slowly

The new Market street sewer, or Panama Canal No. 2, is progressing slowly, as the men are employed in digging a trench some fifteen feet in depth, and the work is very slow. Tunnelling under the railroad tracks is now in progress.

The old sewer trench, the digging of which caused so much wrangling is nearly all filled up. Meanwhile the collection of rank sewerage in the basement of the Sharp Memorial building (Worthington Block) causes passersby to hurry forward to escape the awful odor which issues from the basement. The sewer has become clogged, it is said, and the result is that the basement of the Worthington block has become a sewage disposal plant.

Ross County Fair Company Finally Ended by Receivers

According to the Scioto Gazette the famous old Ross County Fair company matters have finally ended:

A dividend of 36 3-10 per cent, was Thursday declared by E. A. Tinker and W. D. Yapple, as receivers for the Ross County Agricultural Fair Co., upon the capital stock of that defunct corporation. This was considerably more than the stockholders had expected, and was made possible only through the price realized upon the Kite track land, at the third sale by the Common Pleas court.

On each share of stocks, costing the holder $25, they will realize $9.078, and checks for the amounts due the stockholders have been forwarded to them. The final entry in the case, was prepared Thursday. All debts against the corporation have been paid, and the corporation itself has now passed into history.

Some of the stockholders have intimated that they are dissatisfied with the settlement, and expressed an opinion that the receiver should have brought suits to collect money which they claim the corporation has been defrauded out of, and ought to get back. In their report to the court, the receivers stated that they investigated every possible avenue through which any additional assets in addition to what was already secured, could be obtained, but could find no other assets.

Mr. Tinker stated that if the complaining stockholders merely wanted suits brought, the receivers could have brought them, and they would have been fought through all the courts and the litigation drawn out for years. This would have increased the compensation of the receivers and their attorneys, but there was a strong probability that instead of getting more, the stockholders would eventually receive a smaller dividend than they will now get.

HIS DIPLOMACY

When Mrs. Hardiman received her sister's letter telling her all about Kathleen's unfortunate affair, her matchmaking instincts were up in arms. Of course, as Constance had said, Kathleen was a mere child in years, only 17. But girls of 17 sometimes developed very grown-up feelings.

She did not answer her sister's letter at once; to her thinking, hasty judgment was one of the cardinal sins. And she waited to think matters over thoroughly before committing herself.

Pine Grove, Fla., May 17.
 "My Dear Constance:
 "Why not let me have Kathleen for a couple of months? The country is simply magnificent this time of the year, and, although, naturally, it will be rather lonely compared to gay New Orleans, still the contrast may do wonders toward bringing the dear girl out of herself. I don't believe anyone could brood in a garden spot like this.

"By the way, an old friend of mine is coming down from Chicago to spend the summer with me. Her son, a splendid young fellow of 25, is to meet her here for a week's visit. They are extremely exclusive people, and, although not at all wealthy, will doubtless shortly inherit a considerable fortune from the boy's god-father, I think it is. He is a cranky old fellow (80-odd), who refuses to settle a penny on his protegee until he marries and settles down.

"Mind you, not a word of this to Kathleen.

"Let me hear from you. As ever,

Three days later Mrs. Hardiman held her sister's reply in her hand. Kathleen would be delighted to come. It was the very thing of all others. Six or eight weeks among the Florida pines would certainly be the salvation of her.

It was an afternoon of June, pale and sweet with orange blossoms. Rows upon rows of the waxen-leaved trees made a garden grove down below the rose lawn.

Mrs. Hardiman came out on the terrace and flourished a slip of yellow paper in her hand.

Old Mrs. Ogden, seated on a twisted oak chair, looked up with a questioning smile.

"My niece will be here on the 6:20 train," the other announced, sinking down opposite, "and that horrid old Billy is laid up again with his everlasting 'rheumatism.' Do you think Claud will be here in time to—"

Mrs. Hardiman stole a narrow glance into the brown, strong face, with its keen, expressive eyes and firm but smiling mouth. Surely Claude Ogden was a man worth noticing.

"My niece is arriving on that 6:20 train, Mr. Ogden. Do you think you could manage the boys this afternoon?"

"Oh, yes," he said. "I think I can manage them fairly well."

He pulled out his watch. "I've just an hour to make it," he said; "I suppose I'd better be getting out of this toggery."

The train was as usual, late. The passengers stepped out on the platform. There were two or three drummers, an old lady in black and finally—

Surely there was something oddly familiar about the cut of the brown tailor-made gown, the gracefully draped veil that cascaded about her, dainty shoulders, the military carriage of the slender young figure.

"Claude!"

He hurried her on to the trap, and in a minute they were whirling off through clouds of dust.

"But I thought you were on board the Silver Star, en route to Australia!" she exclaimed when she found breath to speak.

"That was all bosh, Kathleen. I never had any intention of putting the ocean between us. After the way we were broken up I thought I'd just hang around until you were of age."

"Poor mamma! She firmly believes that she knows my own mind better than I do myself."

"And suppose I were to tell you that I was about to become very wealthy?"

"It would make no difference whatever in my—"

Somewhat to the girl's surprise he deliberately turned the horses' heads and drove back the other way.

"Claude! You're going wrong."

"No, I am not. Providence had a great big hand in dumping us down here together like this. And we haven't any right to fly in the face of Providence, you know. I was told that long ago, when I was a mere kid."

"What is this funny little place?"

"It's the county courthouse. Hold the reins a second. I've got to get out."

Soon he returned, slipped a bit of folded paper into his pocket as he climbed into the trap.

"I think Mr. Holcomb lives in that little green house over there," he said, pointing with his whip as the horses trotted off.

"But when are we going home?"

Aunt Pat will be—

"Just as soon as the preacher gets through with us. Don't you think Pine Grove will be an ideal spot to spend our honeymoon in?"

"Don't you?" he reiterated, bending down. Their eyes met.

Kathleen thought, perhaps, it would—Nellie Cravey Gilmore.

Jones—"Green bought a second-hand automobile three weeks ago, and he has been arrested six times in it."

Smith—"For exceeding the speed limit?"

Jones—"No; for obstructing the scene."

Boarding Mistress—Is there anything wrong with that egg, Mr. Fourper? I see you according it a very critical examination.

Mr. Fourper—Oh, not anything wrong with the egg, Mrs. Skimpem. I was just looking for the wishbone, that's all.

Mistress—You know, Melinda, we're all very fond of you. I hope you like your room and are content with your wages. I'm thinking of giving you a silk petticoat.

Cook—Foh de Lawd, Miss Howard! How many folks has you been gone an' asked for dinner?

Teacher—Give me a sentence with the word "bachelor" in it?

Willie—A bachelor is a very happy man.

Teacher—Why, Willie, why do you say that?

Willie—Well, that's what pa says.

Mrs. Callahan—"I want to get a pair of shoes for the little bye."

Clerk—"French kid?"

Mrs. Callahan (indignantly)—

"Inade not. He's me own son, born and bred in Ameriky."

FARM HOUSE ROBBED IN THE BROAD LIGHT OF DAY BLOODHOUNDS GET TRAIL

Jefferson township residents, north of Jeffersonville, were treated to a little excitement late Wednesday evening when the Williams-Day bloodhounds were called to the residence of Jesse Hoppes to trail three men who broke into the Hoppes residence and after helping themselves to what they wanted to eat, robbed two small savings banks of about $10 in cash, and made their get-away.

Mr. Hoppes did not discover the burglary until after four o'clock, and he summoned the blood hounds immediately. When the dogs arrived they picked up the trail and followed it to the railroad and north on the railroad to a point about one mile from the Hoppes residence, where they encountered a gang of section men who informed Lossen Day, keeper of the dogs, that three men had passed them headed toward South Solon.

As the dogs had done their part, they were withdrawn and the telephone brought into use, but some miscalculation resulted and the men made their escape and have not been heard from.

They were supposed to have been a party of strangers, who were out of funds and tramping the roads.

The Boy Scouts Land Pickpocket Refuse a Reward

Rounding up a boy who had stolen a pocketbook containing $5 from a woman at the grocers' picnic at Olen-tangy Park, Columbus, Wednesday, and then refusing to accept $3 reward, was the unusual stand taken by members of Troop 17 of the Boy Scouts, according to a story told by Scoutmaster Mark Thompson yesterday.

Finding herself minus her pocket-book, the woman called several of the scouts to her assistance. After rounding up no less than 12 youngsters who answered to the description the pocketbook was finally located and restored to its owner. "The scout law forbids us to take any reward," said the lads, smilingly refusing the proffered reward of $3.

Big Show Here Tomorrow

GRAND STREET PARADE IN THE MORNING.
Tomorrow is show day, and John Robinson will give two exhibitions here that for interest, excitement and merit have never been surpassed by any tented amusement enterprise that ever came to town.

A long and interesting program will be offered by an array of talent, selected to give an exhibition of merit as to please everybody. Among the many features are the John Robinson double herd of performing elephants and one big pachyderm actually plays a huge piano while his chorus of elephants dance in both tune and time.

Marguerite the celebrated New York Hippodrome lion tamer is here with her five educated lions and Prof. Albers with his eight performing polar bears, both acts taking place in the steel cage arena, offering ample protection to the auditors. In the three rings and elevated stages and in mid-air will be seen the Great DaComas, a family of five famous aerialists, also "Upside down Smith," Ash Trio, trapeze artists, and the well known Walton Family of acrobats, William DeMott and Eunice Stokes famous equestrians, a great double act is the acrobatic English cart turn by two sets of acrobatic riders, then Daredevil Liniger's slide for life and Warren Travis the strong man furnish enough thrills for half a dozen shows. Geneva Davis and Tagos, the Robettas, Helen Leach and Berry and Hicks all at one time, four acts, do the daring teeth swinging act in mid-air, with serpentine dances. This season the thirty clowns have invented and are using more new tricks and stunts to please the multitude than ever seen before. People like to know what they are going to see and what they are paying for, so the above list of "ring talent" will partly give evidence of a meritorious program. Besides the big show has its own real wild west exhibition, with real Indians, genuine cowboys and girls, also a band of Cossacks whose thrilling rides are a sensation, a company of U. S. Cavalry and all accompanied by music of the highest grade from John Robinson's Concert band of thirty-five soloists.

DEATH OF MRS. C. L. CRAIG.
A very sad death occurred at the Hodson hospital Friday morning at 5:20, when Mrs. C. L. Craig answered the call of the death angel, after three months of intense suffering. Mrs. Craig was a young woman, only thirty-three years of age, with every reason to expect years of happiness and usefulness. During her entire illness everything that medical science could do was tried in the hope of her recovery and the devoted husband, left entirely alone, has the deepest sympathy in his loss.

As a last hope Mrs. Craig was taken from her home on South Main street to the hospital, three weeks ago.

Mrs. Craig's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Kennedy, of Minneapolis, Minn., were with their daughter for some time during her illness.

The funeral will be held at St. Coleman's church Monday morning at 8:30. Burial in St. Coleman's cemetery.

vaney, stating that Davis was wanted upon five charges of forgery, where he was located, and to arrest him immediately.

About seven o'clock Thursday evening Chief Devaney went to the Arlington Hotel, found Davis in the lobby smoking a cigaret, and placed him under arrest. He was taken to the County Jail and locked up, after the contents of his pockets had been removed and he had been given a sweating out.

Davis stated emphatically that he was the wrong man, and that there was some mistake. He said he called a woman who runs a boarding house in Chillicothe, asking her about a ring he had left with her.

Upon his person was a letter written by a friend, and it was evident from the tone of the letter that Davis had left Huntington on the double quick, and that he had been in Portsmouth, Chillicothe and probably other cities before he came here.

He sent a telegram to a brother-in-law in Washington, D. C., asking for assistance, but did not fail to state that he was arrested here under the name of J. ... Twigg, but had registered here by his real name of Davis.

Davis is still confined in the county jail, and is very anxious to escape before the police from Huntington arrive. He is regarded by the local authorities as a pretty smooth individual, and it is believed that this is not the first time he has been in trouble, as that fact is clearly indicated by the letter he had in his possession.

Davis received two telegrams Friday, one from Lizzie Davis, of Huntington, W. Va., which reads: "Come to Portsmouth and meet me. Will leave Monday P. M. Answer at once." This is from the woman supposed to be his wife.

The other was from a friend by the name of C. A. Hughes, and reads: "Clarence send ticket at once. Lizzie ready to come. Answer, Hughes."

It is evident that Davis' wife, sweetheart, or sister was to come to him here.

Chief of Police Devaney received notification that Chief Davis, of Huntington, W. Va., had applied for extradition papers and would be here after his prisoner perhaps this afternoon.

Police! Police! Who Wants a Job?

Chief Devaney is in a quandary. He is looking for men for special police duty tomorrow during the show. It's an all day's job and the pay is good, but special policemen are as scarce as the proverbial "hen teeth". It will require three or four extra men to insure perfect order, and to handle any unexpected trouble that might arise, but these men cannot be found.

Any man who believes he is capable of handling a club (swinging it, for no trouble is anticipated), wearing a star and looking stern and self-confident and important, should call the chief at once before he is attacked with nervous prostration. He has both phones and is anxious to hear from prospective cops.

Local Men Inspecting Lands Of the Canucks

A. L. West, of the Luse Land and Development Company, accompanied by Judge A. C. Patton and Frank McCormick of this city, are spending a few days in the Houghton Lake district, Saskatchewan, Canada. They will return home next Wednesday.

This is claimed to be one of the wheat districts of northwestern Canada and is being rapidly settled up by farmers from the United States and Europe. Last year some 100,000 farmers located in Canada being drawn there by the reputed cheapness and fertility of the land. The father and mother of J. H. Hicks, the local architect, live on a farm in Saskatchewan. They visited their son in this city not long ago enroute to their former home in Pittsburgh. They are now planning to return to their Canadian home, claiming their health is much better there.

Education Foe of Quack Doctor

GRAFT plays in partnership with ignorance. That is, perhaps, the reason for grafters playing upon children. Education and legislation have done away with most varieties of fake doctors, but a certain type that still flourishes is composed of those who trade on unsophisticated susceptibilities of young men passing through the adolescent period. He usually styles himself "professor" and has a "cure all" for every disease known to mankind, and many that are not.

But it is not so easy to catch those who stay within the limits of the law, and it is this kind who usually are most contemptible and least scrupulous of that parasitic class. Knowing well the susceptibilities of the youthful mind to fear, its ignorance of hygienic laws and the false modesty of parents in failing to instruct the children in vital facts concerning coming manhood or womanhood, the quack skillfully intills his victim's mind with fear of dread disease which can only be avoided or cured by taking some imagined treatment.

If a city boy, he probably goes into one of the so-called science museums wherein are displayed wax figures of persons afflicted with horrible diseases.

Rarely does the boy fail to be taken in. The costly medicines, instruments, and doctor bills soon eat away his savings. When he has borrowed to the limit and if he will not steal the alleged doctor tells him he is cured. But never until he is certain that his patient cannot pay any more. Country boys, however, offer most of the dupes, and these are the best payers, averaging about two to three hundred dollars apiece.

If he inquires further a carefully worded reply invites him to the city offices for a personal examination, but a question form is inclosed in case the young man cannot attend in person. The treatment by mail begins, but all correspondence is kept within technical limits of the law, and only rarely is the "company" sued, even when the victim knows he has been cheated owing to the nature of the case.

But this last "easy money game" of the quack is about played out. Not because of adverse laws, because laws can sometimes be evaded, but by the elimination of the factor that makes this graft possible, namely, ignorance.

Blowser—"I sold my airship this morning."

Blinks—"Why so? Thought you liked it."

Blowser—"It did not suit. Law says it must carry a light at night. The whole town comes out to see me land, and thinks I have been drinking if I do not land it steady late at night."—Judge.

In Social Circles

Of exceptional charm, and enlivening a quiet social season, have been a series of "Victrola Recitals" with which Mrs. H. B. Dahl has entertained a hundred and fifty matrons and girls the past week.

The third of the series was given this afternoon. The beautiful Dahl home, with its wide center hall and spacious connecting rooms, so perfectly adapted to generous entertaining, was redolent with summer flowers, a yellow color scheme being artistically employed.

The wide verandahs, with their trailing window boxes and overlooking the effective landscape gardening of the lawn, were also alluring and drew many of the guests.

The affairs were all marked by a delightful informality encouraged by the spontaneous hospitality of the gracious hostess.

Mrs. Dahl has an unusually choice collection of records, including such artists as Melba, Tetravini, Caruso, Schuman-Henk, Evan Williams, and the Victrola program presented was a rare treat, including in admirable arrangement vocal, instrumental and novelty selections.

At its close a refreshing summer collation was served.

Assisting in the hospitalities were Mesdames D. S. Craig, Ray Maynard, and George Hitchcock, Misses Fanny, Charlotte, Nina and Mary Dahl and Virginia Campbell.

Mrs. William Campbell gave a handsome six o'clock dinner Thursday evening, in compliment to Mrs. James Logan, of Waverly.

The table was laid with eight covers and exceedingly pretty in its decorations of pink and white. After the dinner Mrs. Campbell entertained her guests with the photo plays.

Miss Marie Dale entertained Thursday evening with a delightful little lawn party in honor of her guests, Miss Marie Boultillier, of Louisville, Ky., and Mrs. Josephine McMullen of Hillsboro.

Music, games and delicious refreshments contributed to the pleasure of the evening.

The Ladies of the Maccabees gave a handkerchief shower Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Jennie Marks on East Temple street, in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Marks and Mrs. Willa Sollars, and was planned as a surprise to these ladies. Dainty refreshments were served, and the evening was spent in pleasant conversation, at 9:30 the ladies bid the hostesses good night, wishing them many happy returns of the day.

The Herald Quickly Finds the Answer

If a person has a really meritorious proposition to offer the public, no matter what it may be, an advertisement in THE HERALD will bring results certain and sure.

The truth of this assertion was very forcibly demonstrated this morning. Mr. George Bybee in last night's paper offered for rent the Wike property on East Market street, calling attention to the number of rooms, condition of the property, fruit, water, barn, etc.

This morning Mr. Bybee found advertising a paying business, when nearly a dozen people, in answer to the little, insignificant-looking classified advertisement, called on him to rent the property. Although there are quite a number of empty houses in town, Mr. Bybee found to his satisfaction that vacant houses can be rented if the matter is made known to the public through the modern HERALD classified column. He quickly closed the deal.

ANOTHER FAYETTE COUNTIAN MAKES GOOD IN THE WEST PRESIDENT OF CONFERENCE

Another former Fayette countian has made good in the West.

Rev. James McCord, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McCord, living at the Coal Camp grounds and brother of Prof. Jesse McCord, is now located at Kansas City. For a number of years Mr. McCord was a teacher in Fayette county. Later he became a Methodist Protestant minister, preaching at several places in Ohio. Several years ago he went to Kansas

City, where he was given an appointment as pastor of a Kansas City M. P. church, and for the past three years he has been president of the Missouri Methodist Protestant conference. He is a trustee and a member of the executive committee of the Kansas City University.

Rev. McCord has been spending a few days with his parents here en route home from Boston, where he was a delegate to the Christian Endeavor convention.

The Market Street Sewer Work Progressing Slowly

The new Market street sewer, or Panama Canal No. 2, is progressing slowly, as the men are employed in digging a trench some fifteen feet in depth, and the work is very slow. Tunnelling under the railroad tracks is now in progress.

The old sewer trench, the digging of which caused so much wrangling is nearly all filled up. Meanwhile the collection of rank sewerage in the basement of the Sharp Memorial building (Worthington Block) causes passersby to hurry forward to escape the awful odor which issues from the basement. The sewer has become clogged, it is said, and the result is that the basement of the Worthington block has become a sewage disposal plant.

Ross County Fair Company Finally Ended by Receivers

According to the Scioto Gazette the famous old Ross County Fair company matters have finally ended:

A dividend of 36 3-10 per cent, was Thursday declared by E. A. Tinker and W. D. Yaple, as receivers for the Ross County Agricultural Fair Co., upon the capital stock of that defunct corporation. This was considerably more than the stockholders had expected, and was made possible only through the price realized upon the Kite track land, at the third sale by the Common Pleas court.

On each share of stocks, costing the holder $25, they will realize $9.078, and checks for the amounts due the stockholders have been forwarded to them. The final entry in the case, was prepared Thursday. All debts against the corporation have been paid, and the corporation itself has now passed into history.

Some of the stockholders have intimated that they are dissatisfied with the settlement, and expressed an opinion that the receiver should have brought suits to collect money which they claim the corporation has been defrauded out of, and ought to get back. In their report to the court, the receivers stated that they investigated every possible avenue through which any additional assets in addition to what was already secured, could be obtained, but could find no other assets.

Mr. Tinker stated that if the complaining stockholders merely wanted suits brought, the receivers could have brought them, and they would have been fought through all the courts and the litigation drawn out for years. This would have increased the compensation of the receivers and their attorneys, but there was a strong probability that instead of getting more, the stockholders would eventually receive a smaller dividend than they will now get.

HIS DIPLOMACY

When Mrs. Hardiman received her sister's letter telling her all about Kathleen's unfortunate affair, her matchmaking instincts were up in arms. Of course, as Constance had said, Kathleen was a mere child in years, only 17. But girls of 17 sometimes developed very grown-up feelings!

She did not answer her sister's letter at once; to her thinking, hasty judgment was one of the cardinal sins. And she waited to think matters over thoroughly before committing herself.

Pine Grove, Fla., May 17.
"My Dear Constance:
"Why not let me have Kathleen for a couple of months? The country is simply magnificent this time of the year, and, although, naturally, it will be rather lonely compared to gay New Orleans, still the contrast may do wonders toward bringing the dear girl out of herself. I don't believe anyone could brood in a garden spot like this."

"By the way, an old friend of mine is coming down from Chicago to spend the summer with me. Her son, a splendid young fellow of 25, is to meet her here for a week's visit. They are extremely exclusive people, and, although not at all wealthy, will doubtless shortly inherit a considerable fortune from the boy's god-father. I think it is. He is a cranky old fellow (80-odd), who refuses to settle a penny on his protegee until he marries and settles down."

"Mind you, not a word of this to Kathleen."

"Let me hear from you. As ever, "Pat."

Three days later Mrs. Hardiman held her sister's reply in her hand. Kathleen would be delighted to come. It was the very thing of all others. Six or eight weeks among the Florida pines would certainly be the salvation of her.

It was an afternoon of June, pale and sweet with orange blossoms. Rows upon rows of the waxen-leaved trees made a garden grove down below the rose lawn.

Mrs. Hardiman came out on the terrace and flourished a slip of yellow paper in her hand.

Mrs. Hardiman stole a narrow glance into the brown, strong face, with its keen, expressive eyes and firm but smiling mouth. Surely Claude Ogden was a man worth noticing.

"My niece is arriving on that 6:20 train, Mr. Ogden. Do you think you could manage the boys this afternoon?"

"Oh, yes," he said. "I think I can manage them fairly well."

He pulled out his watch. "I've just an hour to make it," he said; "I suppose I'd better be getting out of this toggerly."

The train was as usual, late. The passengers stepped out on the platform. There were two or three drummers, an old lady in black and finally—

Surely there was something oddly familiar about the cut of the brown tailor-made gown, the gracefully draped veil that cascaded about her, dainty shoulders, the military carriage of the slender young figure.

"Claude!"

"Kathleen!"

He hurried her on to the trap, and in a minute they were whirling off through clouds of dust.

"But I thought you were on board the Silver Star, en route to Australia!" she exclaimed when she found breath to speak.

"That was all bosh, Kathleen. I never had any intention of putting the ocean between us. After the way we were broken up I thought I'd just hang around until you were of age."

"Poor mamma! She firmly believes that she knows my own mind better than I do myself."

"And suppose I were to tell you that I was about to become very wealthy?"

"It would make no difference whatever in my—"

Somewhat to the girl's surprise he deliberately turned the horses' heads and drove back the other way.

"Claude! You're going wrong."

"No, I am not. Providence had a great big hand in dumping us down here together like this. And we haven't any right to fly in the face of Providence, you know. I was told that long ago, when I was a mere kid."

"What is this funny little place?"

"It's the county courthouse. Hold the reins a second. I've got to get out."

Soon he returned, slipped a bit of folded paper into his pocket as he climbed into the trap.

"I think Mr. Holcomb lives in that little green house over there," he said, pointing with his whip as the horses trotted off.

"But when are we going home?"

Aunt Pat will be—

"Just as soon as the preacher gets through with us. Don't you think Pine Grove will be an ideal spot to spend our honeymoon in?"

"Don't you?" she reiterated, bending down. Their eyes met.

Kathleen thought, perhaps, it would. Nellie Cravey Gillmore.

Jones—"Green bought a second-hand automobile three weeks ago, and he has been arrested six times in it."

Smith—"For exceeding the speed limit?"

Jones—"No; for obstructing the view."

Boarding Mistress—Is there anything wrong with that egg, Mr. Fourper? I see you according it a very critical examination.

Mr. Fourper—Oh, not anything wrong with the egg, Mrs. Skimpem. I was just looking for the wishbone, that's all.

Mistress—You know, Melinda, we're all very fond of you. I hope you like your room and are content with your wages. I'm thinking of giving you a silk petticoat.

Cook—Foh de Lawd, Miss Howard! How many folkses has you been gone an' asked foh dinner?

Teacher—Give me a sentence with the word "bachelor" in it?

Willie—A bachelor is a very happy man.

Teacher—Why, Willie, why do you say that?

Willie—Well, that's what pa says.

Mrs. Callahan—"I want to get a pair of shoes for the little bye."

Clerk—"French kid?"

Mrs. Callahan (indignantly)—

"Indade not. He's me own son, born and bred in Ameriky."

DR. WILEY.

No man in public office in a long, long time has been the object of such bitter and relentless attack and the same time the recipient of such wholesale and unstinted praise as Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief of the Government Bureau of Chemistry. Most people in this section know but little of Dr. Wiley and his work.

Since Dr. Wiley has been so prominent in the press of the nation during the last few days it may not be amiss to learn a few things about the work he has to do in his position.

Briefly stated it is Dr. Wiley's official duty to see to it that no impure food compounds or substitutes containing injurious ingredients are sold to the American people. Uncle Sam some time ago decided that the people should not be robbed of their money and furnished alleged drugs and food stuffs which seriously threatened the health of those who purchased.

Like Inspector Loeb at the New York custom office, when he assumed official charge of the department, Dr. Wiley got busy and made a specialty of looking after the affairs of the department. Naturally this activity aroused a storm of protest from many concerns which had grown rich and powerful selling impure food stuffs and drugs. Those concerns which made no secret of plying a nefarious trade were soon joined in their loud protests by those concerns whose business conduct was only a shade off color. They were not "unreasonably" bad but still bad enough not to court a too confoundedly searching investigation.

All those concerns which were hit and hit hard by Dr. Wiley's department and those which feared an investigation joined in the hue and cry for the scalp of Wiley.

The energetic man of medicine may be a little too severe in his rules and his application of rules, but it is a mighty difficult job to convince a disinterested American citizen that a too rigid scrutiny can be maintained over the manufacture of food stuffs and drugs.

Any firm operated on the dead level of honesty in its dealings with the public need have nothing to fear at the hands of Dr. Wiley or any one else at the head of the department over which he now presides.

But it is claimed that Dr. Wiley insists on following his own opinion and thus in many instances causes loss of time and money to firms engaged in the manufacture of foods and drugs.

Well that may be true, but if there is any question about the matter it should be settled for all time and the expense and trouble is a good investment for the firm.

Better to act on the safe side and err at the expense of the companies who make millions of dollars profit out of their business than to err at the expense of a helpless people who rely upon the protection which the government promises them in the department which Dr. Wiley heads, is the view the general run of people take of the matter.

There may be reasons why Dr. Wiley should be removed, there may be reasons why he is unfit to continue in the position which he now holds, but strenuousness in the discharge of his duty—an honest activity on behalf of the people whom he is sworn to protect are certainly not enough.

The people whose rights are infringed in the most cowardly of all ways—the sale of impure foods and drugs—are not on the ground to fight, but those whose pockets are affected are "Johnny on the spot" all the time.

Although Dr. Wiley may not suit some of the rich manufacturers of food stuffs whose profits are cut down, he is highly satisfactory to the good house wives, the nation over.

This is proof that he is rendering the right kind of service. If he was easy with the manufacturers we would hear less complaint about him.

To the outsider it looks a great deal like Wiley and Loeb were on the right track.

POETRY FOR TODAY

THE LIGHTER MOOD.

Just a little loafing as we trude the road along!
Just a moment here and there for smiling and for song!
The mountain, grave and splendid, rears its head into the blue.
But it gives a kindly shelter to the blossoms and the dew.

The deepest sea makes playthings of the waves that roll and break.
The storm cloud so majestic has a rainbow in its wake.
So, be you ne'er so wise and good and be you ne'er so strong.
There's no disgrace in pausing for a smile and for a song.

—Washington Star.

HEALTH HINT FOR TODAY.

Proper Way to Drink Milk.

The proper way of drinking milk is little understood. Thousands drink milk without removing the receptacle from their lips. No sooner does this mass of milk reach the stomach than the gastric juices curdle it and form masses of hard, tough and impenetrable curd. If the digestion is sufficiently vigorous it may be taken care of, but few have such digestion. If the milk were taken slowly, at the same time a piece of bread being taken, it would be finely divided, and the curd would be broken up and the processes of digestion would proceed readily. However, it is an evident rule that milk should never be taken rapidly in any considerable quantity, but should be slowly sipped or taken with a spoon or in connection with bread or some dry cereal.

Cobweb Gatherers.

Getting a living ought not to be very much of a problem to a man who is willing to be a little unorthodox. There is a fellow down in Greenwich Village who collects cobwebs for a living.

"But what on earth for?" he was asked.

"I sell 'em to the big hotel guys."

"What do they want with them?" "De rich blokes won't buy old wines unless they get de cobwebs on 'em."

Not to Be Doubted.

"What's that you call your mule?" "I call him Corporation," answered the old colored man.

"How did you come to give him such a name?"

"Fum studyin' de animal an' readin' de papers. Dat mule gits mo' blame an' abuse dan anything else in de township an' goes ahead havin' his own way jes' de same."

Farmer Breaks Down Tells All

Admits Killing Wife When Told Officers Unearthed Body.

Charlotte, Mich., July 21.—William Lonsberry, a farmer, arrested a week ago following his aged mother's confession that her son killed his wife, Sarah, confessed to the crime after he was confronted with the fact that the authorities had unearthed the body of the woman on his farm.

Lonsberry in his confession blames his mother for all the trouble. He said that after his mother came to live with him his wife nagged continually and finally, following a quarrel one night, he struck her and she fell to the floor. After trying to revive her and failing, they buried her beneath a sheep shed on the farm. The body, though badly decomposed, was identified when found by a plain gold ring which the woman wore.

Railroad Is Cited For Contempt

Columbus, Delaware & Marion Line In Limelight Again.

Columbus, O., July 21.—Matters on the C. D. & M. litigation and the long drawn out fight over the receivership of the road were brought to a culminating point when Judge E. B. Kinkead cited John G. Webb, president of the road; George E. Whysall, at one time co-receiver, and at present the receiver appointed by the court of common pleas of Marion county; Guy M. Walker, Wall street, New York attorney, and Curtis C. Williams, Columbus lawyer, to appear before him and show cause why they should not be committed for contempt of court.

The rule was entered on the application and specific charges of Receiver Eli M. West, and the action of the court will bring this complicated litigation where the many questions involved will be at last threshed out.

The papers have been served on the parties cited and the date fixed for the hearing is July 26.

Daly Cannot Sell Self

Daly Finds Cincinnati Slave Market Quiet at Present.

Cincinnati, O., July 21.—Fred Daly, who advertised two days ago that he wanted a "master" who would hold him as a slave and thus end his futile hunt for work, still belongs to himself, although six bidders are ready to say the word that will make him "sold."

But Daly is a careful auctioneer. The public hasn't reached his price. "I want to sell myself," said Daly. "Not loan, but sell."

None of those six bidders is inclined to take him at his price. Daly has investigated the offers. Each bidder, including a manufacturer, a restaurant keeper and a saloon keeper, offered wages. Some offered homes. But no one was willing to assume the responsibility of a human chattel.

Is It Possible?

Sporting Men Declare Johnson will Throw Fight to Wells.

London, July 21.—It was charged in sporting circles that Jack Johnson is planning to lay down to Bombardier Wells and permit him to win the world's heavyweight title in their coming fight.

It is only alleged by men "in the know" that the preliminary negotiations between Johnson and Wells' representatives have taken on many suspicious aspects.

Johnson, sporting circles hear, is willing to "lay down" to the Englishman because he is sore on the way he has been treated by American sporting men. He also realizes that he is getting along in years and wants to clean up as much money as possible in a jump. Incidentally, it is said the promoters expect to take in a million dollars at the gate by holding the fight in a giant stadium which will seat 200,000 people.

Put-In-Bay, O., July 21.—Once a lifesaver and then again to the rescue in releasing a stranded boat from the rocks, Father Manning, assistant pastor of St. Peter's and St. Paul's church of Sandusky, was a hero during the storm. ## WINNING SUCCESS BY GETTING AN EDUCATION

A VERY one must be more or less educated. Even the savage cannot get along without learning a good deal about the world he lives in.

What is this education of which we hear so much? The word itself tells the whole story. "Education" is "leading out," according to the meaning of the word as it comes to us from the Latin.

Now, "leading out" is altogether different from "pouring in." Indeed, so widespread is the idea that Education means pouring and pounding facts into the mind that we have almost lost the true sense and grasp of the word's real meaning.

What is it that is "led out of the mind" in Education? Power. Education has to do with mind power, how to direct it and how it should best be used.

The real man, owner of body and mind, must, to get the best in life, give his mind a stern training. He must use it in such a way that he, its master, can show what he can do.

A man that wants to fly through the air must first make an air machine. The first step, which is the desire to fly through the air, leads on to the doing of it, if the man keeps at it. The process is at once simple and beautiful.

One day the real man back of mind and body has this wish to fly, to speed through the air as a bird speeds. He turns this wish over to his mind saying:

"You and I will work this out. I will think, and you will do what I order. Some day we will be able to make of wood and metal the very thing we work out here in the unseen mental shop."

So the man and his mind work over the problem together until the mind understands what the man wants. Then the man says to his mind:

"We have at last worked this out right. Now let us tell the body about it."

Then the man and his mind speak to the body, and tell it to make a model of the mind picture. The mind guides the hands and body until it has made an exact duplicate of the mental flying machine.

When this is done the man and his mind study its every part to see if the body has done true work. If not, they begin again. And when, at last, it is clear that the real machine is exactly like the mind model, the man takes his mind and body with him into the machine, starts the motor, and off they go.

In all this, power has come forth. And power is the one thing that must be developed by Education.

There are many steps to be taken while the little child grows to be the man who succeeds in making a practical flying machine. In that time there are no end of lessons to be learned. Every one of these lessons has a single purpose; to make the mind act, and by action, to gain strength, and by gaining strength, to be able to store up power.

In its effort to make good citizens the government demands a certain amount of education of all children. They learn those first principles of things, which, as far as we know, best serve them to become workers in life. When school days are passed, Education is supposed to be finished. Books are closed, lessons are done, the youth is henceforth free.

As a matter of fact, the greatest book in the world is about to be opened to him—the book of life. The hardest lesson just set before him; how to live like a man. The youth is not free, NOW. He was free THEN. Be he rich and idle, poor and industrious; or, poor and idle, rich and industrious; the responsibility of life is before him.

Where, then, does Education come in?

It comes in here. The desires of man must be as high as his nature—and his nature is divine.

The mind of the man must be trained to such a degree of power that when it is "led out" it will be able to deal with his wishes.

The body of the man must be his servant. It must do as he says. How, shall we learn to get this education?

No one can say definitely, for every one of us differs from every other. What each must do to let out his power he must find for himself; but some things are true of us all.

And they are these. Everything a man is called upon to do he can do perfectly; not, perhaps, the first time, but he is bound to do it perfectly if he keeps on trying.

Every job a man is called upon to do is not the end of his work, but beginning. Every job has an opportunity locked up in it. Stone-cutting in a quarry was not stone-cutting to Hugh Miller. It was Nature's wide open book of geology.

Everything a man does other people will look at and by it be more or less influenced. Hence, what a man does SPELLS THE MAN. He should take care that it spells him correctly. The job and the thing he makes are photographs of his mind.

The more care he takes the better picture he makes.

If education teaches a man that he is always showing himself up in his work he has found the true way and meaning of it.

TUCKED SHIRT WAIST

This very ladylike style will meet the approval of any woman who seeks a model at once simple and chic. The front of the waist has a small panel, formed by the use of two tucks at each side of it, simulating a double box plait. The closing is concealed under one of these tucks. At each shoulder there is a small tuck in Gibson style. The back of the waist is entirely plain, with just a few gathers at the belt. The neck is finished with a shaped stock collar and the closely fitted leg o' mutton sleeves are gathered at the armhole. This is a model which is suitable both for wash materials such as linen, pique, lawn, percale, madras and the like, and for pongee, foulard, messaline and cheviot, challis or cashmere.

The pattern (4557) is cut in sizes 32 to 42 inches bust measure. Medium sizes requires 3 3/4 yards of 20 inch material.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department" of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

A minister meeting a neighbor's boy who had just come out of a fight on New Year's day with a fearful black eye, put his hand on the boy's head and said:
"My boy, I pray you may never fight again, and that you may never receive another black eye."
"That's all right," said the boy, "you go home and pray over your own kid. I gave him two of them."

A Kick.

"Well, ain't it?"
"I wrote 'em some literature to help me get summer boarders, but they had nothing of the kind in stock."

The Soft Answer.

"Murphy, did yez say ye eud lick me wid yer eyes shut?"
"I did, Misher Doolan, sir. Ye see I always shut me eyes whin I'm dhreamin'. Have a drink?"

Worse Yet.

"My wife always tears her hair whenever I come home late."
"Which makes you feel mean, eh?"
"Yes; and which also makes it necessary for me to buy more hair."

MY LADY RUTLEDGE

Original

"Can you take me to Rutledge Hall?"

The man stared. "Nobody goes to Rutledge Hall these days," he protested.

"Somebody's going there today, however," I returned. And so it proved, for a little later we were on our way, while my companion, the stage driver, was informing me that, in his opinion, the present owner of the Hall, Percy Dalton, must be a wild sort of chap, trotting all over the globe, yet in all these years since old Stephen Rutledge had died and left the property to his nephew, the man had not once been near the place. He also added the information that not even the caretaker was living at the hall now. In all of this I was more or less interested, for I myself was Percy Dalton, and was there for the express purpose of looking over my inheritance. The fact that the caretaker was gone was news and not altogether pleasant, and further inquiry brought out the surprising assertion that the man had been frightened away. "They say there's a lady seen walkin' 'bout the house," my informant went on, "one that was dead and buried years ago," he added.

"Do they give her a name?" I asked.

"The young wife o' old Thomas Rutledge," was the answer. "She died sudden."

I knew that my grandfather's second wife had died soon after their marriage, but that there was anything suspicious in the fact I had never heard and did not now believe.

My reason for coming to the hall was to find if my hope of giving a house party there seemed feasible. A massive and imposing pile I found the house to be, but ruin and neglect was written all about it. I had brought the keys and at length found myself in one of the front rooms and a fire roaring up the broad chimney. There was no way of lighting the place, but it was moonlight, and after drawing out an old couch on which I proposed to sleep I sat looking out into the vine-tangled garden. Suddenly a shadow fell across the pathway and a moment later a woman appeared, slight and girlish, and enveloped in a long garment of gray. Slowly the form advanced, paused as if looking over the old garden, then, turning, disappeared.

"My lady of Rutledge Hall!" I exclaimed under my breath.

I determined that on the following day I would make a thorough examination of the house both within and without, and began bright and early. It was nearly noon, however, before anything unusual happened. Then, while in a chamber, I glanced into a long mirror reflecting the part of the room toward which my back was turned. A crimson curtain hung there as I looked last, now—like a portrait inclosed by the mirror's frame—stood a girl whose right hand held the curtain aside, her red lips slightly parted and a startled look in her brown eyes. I turned to confront the original. She was gone! Pulling aside the drapery I found a door, closed and locked.

Had I been tricked by a too vivid imagination? I did not believe it. Neither could I bring myself to fancy anything supernatural in the mysterious figure, she had too much the look of flesh and blood. Presently I renewed my search, with greater eagerness than ever, but it was several hours later before I entered that part of the house previously occupied by the caretaker. Then I approached from the outside, but what was this? Was he here at last?

and there were signs of life. Puzzled, I knocked at the door. It opened, and for the second time I found myself looking into a pair of startled brown eyes. Yes, I had found the mysterious lady, and after introducing myself found her name to be Arvilla French and learned how she came to be here. Her father was not living, her mother's health required a summer in a quiet place. Miss French had been attracted by the romantic neglect of Rutledge Hall, and coming across the man who had cared for the place, learned that she might occupy a few of the back rooms gratuitously for the sake of there being someone about the house.

We soon found that we had several acquaintances in common, and a happy thought occurred to me. "Miss French," I began, "I am convinced that you are just the person to help me decide the matter that brought me down here. Do you think it possible that this old house can be made to accommodate a house party within two or three months?"

She looked thoughtful. "There are great possibilities," she admitted, slowly, then more decisively: "Yes, Mr. Dalton, I am sure it can be made delightful."

The house party took place the following August, and Arvilla French was one of my guests, and—well—it was not until the following spring that she became in truth My Lady of Rutledge Hall—Boston Post.

THE DATE IS FIXED ELKS' BUCKEYE LAKE TRIP FOR THE BIG EXCURSION

Efforts to contract for forty or more cars for the first annual excursion of the Elks' lodge, taking the place of the Sunday school excursions, to be used during the month of August have failed, and the date of September 6th, has been fixed, and the accommodations will be far better than could be obtained in August, farmers all over the country will be through with their work, and everything will be in readiness for a day of pleasure, before commencing the fall work.

The committee on arrangements closed the deal with the Buckeye Lake authorities and with the C. A. & C. Railway company, and the details will be worked out later. Plans call for forty to sixty cars, and each Elk will be a committee of one to prevent rowdiness and see that all are taken care of properly.

It will be an excursion for the entire family, and the coaches will not be overcrowded. Tickets will be sold in advance, and the fare for adults will be $1, while children will be charged 60c for the round trip, and admission to the Buckeye Lake amusement grounds, which consists of one of the best lines of attractions in the state.

One section will probably start at Sabina, and stops will be made at New Holland, and possibly at Williamsport. No delay will be made in transit, and no changing of cars will take place. Further details will be announced later.

Slate Mills Man Seeing Washington

Mr. Geo. Annis, of Slate Mills, O., a popular and widely known dealer in locust posts, railroad ties, lumber and general store, with two hearty and happy children, spent yesterday looking over the local jobbing market, seeing the city sights and enjoying the visit generally. In the afternoon friends automobilized the party to the country, taking in Bloomingburg section and seeing some of the prize farms, returning to this city in time to take the C. H. & D. flyer for home.

Mr. Annis owns several hundred acres of Ross county hill lands, which is farmed successfully, besides grazing much stock and cutting some timber. The yards at his railroad station are one of the show features of that section of Ohio. Mr. Annis likes our city and is a liberal buyer in this market.

Ban Is Put On Campaign Cigars

Hearken to this! No more campaign cigars, drinks, or other refreshments can be used for enticing the votes to flow into the ballot box bearing the candidate's name who dispenses the tokens of "good will."

This is the claim made under the Kimble corrupt practices law, and woe be unto the man who starts out with his box of campaign cigars, or sets 'em up in any manner whatsoever, for the Kimble law will get him if he doesn't watch out—maybe.

It is said that the Anti-Corruption League of Ross county will enforce this law, and at the meeting at Maple Grove Hotel on August 2nd, this will receive attention.

So far as known the campaign cigar will be used in this county, unless there is protest, which is hardly likely, but down in Ross the citizens will escape the campaign cigar evil.

Our Local Corporations Need Not Rush Tax Checks

According to the action taken by state authorities in returning to a number of Chillicothe corporations checks which had been forwarded to the Treasurer of State in payment of the annual fee, our Washington C. H. and Fayette county corporations need not be in such a rush about sending in checks.

Concerning the matter the Chillicothe News Advertiser says: Under the Willis law, which has been amended, these fees were paid to the secretary of state not later than July 1st, but under the new law the fees are not paid until on or before Oct. 1, and not until a certificate from the tax commission of the correct amount due has been sent to the company.

On an average of from 25 to 35 corporations are remitting to the state treasury daily, and it is necessary to return these checks with the explanation that this money is not yet due.

Before the new law was enacted, the state tax commission sent out word that these fees should be paid between July 15 and August 15. The new law extends the time to Oct. 1.

Ohio has in its strong box now approximately $3,270,000, which is $1,197,000 less than it had a year ago. Much of this shrinkage is due to the fact that Willis law taxes, which exceed $1,000,000, were payable before July 1, whereas now, as has been explained, they do not come until late in the fall.

Another Town In Same Boat

The following excerpt from the Hillsboro News-Herald indicates that Washington is not the only city on the map that has apologetic telephone service:

"Rotten" is what everyone is now saying of the service given by the Hillsboro Telephone Co. It is almost impossible to hear or be heard and frequently you can not even get an answer from central. There can be no good excuse for such conditions. Only a few years ago the service was of the best. Then the company was in debt and paying no dividends, but spending large sums for repairs. Now there is a pinching economy in maintenance expenses and a constant decrease in the efficiency of the plant. Dividends, however, are being paid regularly and at an increasing rate. The stockholders are getting more for their money, but the patrons of the company much less. Good thing for the stockholders, but hard on the telephone users and also bad in a business way for Hillsboro.

Twins Too Much For Heber L. Jones

The following article concerning Heber L. Jones, formerly of this city, appeared in Friday's issue of the Greenfield Republican:

Some time ago through the columns of the Republican, Jones the photographer offered $5.00 reward for any baby that could make him mad. Tuesday he appeared at the office; there was a wild look in his eyes, his hair was on end and he sported a fairly well developed case of nervous prostration. He gave us no details but wished us to kindly but firmly inform the public that from this date on twins are barred from the contest.

FRIEND OF AMERICANS.

Crown Princess of Roumania, Who Enjoys Meeting Them.

Crown Princess Marie of Roumania, daughter of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, is the friend of Americans. Recently society leaders in Bucharest let it be known that the American women in the Roumanian capital need not expect social recognition.

About this time invitations were sent out for a social at which it was expected Princess Marie herself was to be a guest of honor. According to custom, the names of the proposed guests is extremely tactful and clever. It is said if Ferdinand ever comes to the throne of Roumania she will be the power behind the throne. Her daughter, the Princess Elizabeth, who inherits much of her mother's beauty, is now seventeen, the same age as the heir to the English throne. A marriage between the two would not be displeasing to the English people and would certainly be desirable for Roumania from a diplomatic standpoint. The suggestion that a match be arranged with Princess Marie Alexandra of Fife, second daughter of the king's sister, Louise, duchess of Fife, has not been received with much enthusiasm by the English people, with whom the Fife connection is not very popular. However, rumor now says that the lovely Princess Elizabeth is engaged to Prince George, eldest son of the crown prince of Greece.

Going the Limit.

The novelty of having his hair trimmed by a lady barber, Judge relates, appealed to a mildly intoxicated clubman who entered an establishment where girls were employed. Louth to leave the chair after his hair had been trimmed, the clubman said to the girl: "Now gimme a shave." The girl performed the task and awaited further instructions. "Guess you can put on a to the function were submitted to the royal lady. She scanned the list and then remarked:

"I see the names of So-and-so are not here."

"They are Americans, your royal highness," was the reply. "They are distinguished guests in our capital. If their names are not included in this list of guests I shall not attend the reception," declared the princess, returning the list with an air of finality that had its effect. Every American woman of any social standing at all was immediately invited to the affair, and the princess made a point of singling out the unpopular Americans for gracious attentions.

couple of hot towels," said the clubman. After the hot towels had been applied the clubman enjoyed a face massage and permitted his hair to be anointed with perfume.

"Anything else?" sweetly asked the maid. Hesitating a moment as if to make up his mind, the clubman replied. "Yes; I guess you may pull a couple of teeth."

THE MAHOGANY TABLE

The indifference with which a woman may squander the money of a wealthy man was not one of Nettie's characteristics; her mistake resulted through ignorance, want of knowledge of her husband's ability to spend. She never asked him about his money possibilities. When she needed anything it was enough for her to hear his, "We may." He had never yet said, "We may not!" They made one addition after another to the pretty house-furnishings until all that the parlor needed was a mahogany table.

"It must be mahogany," she said,
looking brightly up into Dick's face.
"For the nicer it is, the more pride
we shall take in it, and the longer it lasts, the more economical we shall find it in the end!"

Somehow, they were not quite so happy after the table came. Dick would often return from business tired and harassed and instead of the evening stories or interesting talk, paced the floor with a tireless tread that made Nettie's nerves ache.
Once or twice he spoke irritably and sharply to her, had to catch himself and apologize for not being as loving as usual, until one night when she told him he was positively cross and he answered something under his breath about its being enough to drive a man to drink, she ran upstairs in a crying fit and he went out at the front door, banging it after him.

Whether it was a long or short time after this troubled incident, Nettie could never tell, but suddenly there was noise and commotion in the hall, the sound of voices and many feet, and Dick's voice cold and desperate, saying: "I'll go quietly enough; don't make a fuss; only let me see my wife first!" She was in the hall in an instant, struck dumb at the sight of two burly officers.

"Oh, Dick! Dick!" moaned the grief-stricken Nettie. Whatever had the officers meant when they said embezzlement? Dick a thief? Never!
It was all a mistake, a terrible, wicked mistake, and all her fault, for she had been cross to him when he was tired, and this was a punishment for them both.

Dick Rice's father threw down his evening paper in astonishment and his slipped feet fell with a thud to the floor, knocking over the foot-stool as he sprang up on sight of his son's wife, wildly disheveled, throwing herself sobbingly upon the bosom of Mrs. Rice, declaring that Dick wasn't a thief and she didn't know what embezzlement meant anyway.

Drawing on boots and coat, he actively called numberless people over the telephone, ending by going out himself; while Mrs. Rice, trying to comfort the girl, alternately dried her own tears and Nettie's on the same handkerchief.

Hours had dragged by to their anxious fancy when Mr. Rice returned, bringing Mr. Ross and Mr. Plunkett, members of Dick's firm, and among them Dick himself; not a cowed, trembling Dick afraid to look them in their honest faces, but a white-faced anxious Dick whose gaze searched one by one the faces before him—lastly his mother's and Nettie's. Mr. Ross was voluble in his distress. "Not for world's would he have had this terrible mistake occur.
Dick was an honest fellow; he had trusted him as his own son; he should speak or himself."

Nettie saw the shamefaced expression cross the crabbled face of Mr. Plunkett, who endeavored to hide the fact that he had secretly held a motiveless grudge against Dick and watching his opportunity had charged him with theft at the first sign of proof.

"I cannot deny it!" came the unexpected reply from the boy's ashen lips. The men fell back. "I wanted rather nice things at home," he continued in a low voice. Nettie heard as though waking from a dream. "I bought them," she heard him say, "thinking I could save money enough of pay for them; but I could not and payment was due.
I held a responsible position for the firm; large sums of money passed through my hands, and I used a sum.
I did not mean to steal; I could have replaced it soon, but somebody—he generously left Mr. Plunkett's name unspoken—'watching, found it out.'"

"Oh, Dick! Dick!" cried Nettie, throwing herself into his arms. "It was all my fault. I pressed you to spend for things we could have done without—but I didn't know—you didn't tell me—" she sobbed, choking her voice; she could not go on.

His face lighted. He held her to him in a wild joy. "You do not hate me!" he cried; "you can believe in me again when this is lived down?"
To him this was the only consideration. "You can love me still?" repeated the young husband.

"Always! always!" she answered,
oblivious to everyone but him.
Looking into each other's eyes the two felt they had been through deep experience that drew them only closer together.—Boston Post.

Winning Success

JUDGE SEWELL, of Massachusetts, once said: "Home is that place to which a man, having returned, he is no longer abroad."

Home is made by all the minds of the family. Each member of the family thinks of the home as a whole or of a room in the home, and straightway the some or the room pictures these thoughts; not always clearly, to be sure, for no picture is ever quite accurate.

This is the reason that you do not look like your photograph all the time. The original is always a little sharper or a little different. But we may truly say that the home is made by the thoughts of all who live in it.

But the home changes?
Yes, it changes just as family thoughts change. One day some member of the family brings in the thought of a new chair for the parlor.
When, after a while, every one in the family has that chair-thought, the chair comes.

Or, the daughter of the family wants a new bureau. She talks about it until she wakes up enough bureau thought in the family to get a majority, then the new bureau arrives.

The real man back of mind and body owns both and should make them work for him. In the same way he must learn that home and surroundings are his to work with. They are his to make and to mold exactly as he sees fit.

It is clear, then, that if a man wants to be surrounded by good things—that is, things worth having—he must think of them HARD ENOUGH TO WORK FOR THEM. When we come to talk about education, we shall see more clearly how this is to be done.
But we can see now that true education has to do with many things besides books. It being with self-mastery, which means control of mind, control of body, and a knowledge how thought can make a pleasant place to live in.

Can it be done?
Anything can be done with patience.
A man learns a great deal by gaining the mastery of his own thoughts. And one of the first things he learns is this:

A passing wish or a sudden notion is not a thought.

A real thought is a powerful thing.
It acts with great force. There is as much difference between a thought and a passing wish as there is between a flash of lightning and a firefly.

A real thought forces you into action.

A caterpillar surrounds itself with a cocoon for the purpose of becoming a butterfly, later on. However, much a caterpillar may wish, in the morning, to be a butterfly in the evening, it must go into the cocoon, and wait patiently to be changed over to the new form.

A real thought is like the caterpillar. It must make up its cocoon of the principal thought, and of all other helpful thoughts that can be gathered about it. Then it must wait, and the thing for which the cocoon stands will come forth in due time in all its beauty.

The Norwegian writer, Bjornson, once said this: "The EXPRESSION is the thought." This is worth remembering, for it means that the thought does not reach its end nor fulfill its purpose UNTIL IT IS WORKED OUT.

Hence, thought, like iron in a forge must be heated and hammered and put into shape, and when the object is made, the thought has reached the end of its career AS A THOUGHT, but it is just beginning its career as a THING.

Home, then, shows perhaps more clearly than anything else just what thoughts are actually heated and hammered into shape by a person or a family. And back of his truth lie many things and conditions.

Of these, the first is this: Home should picture real thoughts, and not mere wishes and notions. Thoughts are things we work for, strive for, and pay for. Wishes and notions lead us into debt, or into a struggle with the installment plan, or into the folly of trying to picture somebody else's thoughts who can produce a new bureau because she is ready for it.

A man who mortgages his furniture to buy an automobile is trying to picture the thoughts of another man who can perhaps afford it. He is making home and property tell a lie about him.

This untruth arises because he is not able to govern and command his thoughts. If he could command them he would not think of the automobile until he was ready for it.

Hence, to begin with, home TELLS
THE TRUTH ABOUT EVERYBODY
IN THE FAMILY.

It is hard to tell about this comedy without laughing. You will agree to this when you see it. See it and treat yourself to a good laugh.

Vail of Happiness.

Pathe film d'art. A beautiful drama.
Faust is coming soon.

How, then, can a poor man have a beautiful home?

There are two ways.
The first is this: The home of a poor man must always tell the truth.
It must not spell debt and foolishness.
It can be as neat and tidy, as homelike and as comfortable as any other man's home.

Bit by bit, one who owns the home can think it into a new and fairer form by thinking new and fairer thoughts about it.

These thoughts will come true.
There is another important thing about home. It is almost as much a part of us as the body itself. As we make it, so it helps to make us. For that reason it should always show the best of us, in order that the best of us may keep coming back to us, as a reminder.

Mind, body and home are the beginnings of all success in life. The mind is the power that governs the body and the home. As a man runs his body machine, so he makes progress in his work. As he makes home a more and more perfect copy of his true thoughts, the more it will inspire
him.

As home is a little world created by a man or by a family, it should be a little world of beauty and of simplicity.
It will become more lovely as thought is given to it, and as the loveliness of the thought increases, the loveliness of home follows.

Then home becomes a place of beauty and an inspiration to those who live in it, because inspiration makes it what it is.

Preserving Pineapple

Preparing pineapple for preserving is a simple and easy task if one follows this plan. Have a clean board about eight inches square with a bright new ten penny nail driven through the center, point on top.

Take a heavy cloth and twist out the crown, then place the pineapple base down on the nail; with a sharp knife trim off the top, then with a sharp stiff bladed knife pare the pineapple lengthwise, turning the fruit meanwhile on the nail.

A little practice and one can take off a goodly portion of the skin from top to base with one stroke of the knife.

To remove the eyes, use a curved bladed knife, which can be bought for 10 cents, and which is usually used to eye potatoes with.

Be sure and keep the knives clean while at work.

Core the pineapples, after quarter-ing them, and then slice, cube, or grate as preferred. To nine pounds of fruit allow three pounds of sugar and one quart of water. Cook until tender and until a rich sirup has been formed. When through take any sirup that may be left, the cores, and the eyes of the pineapples, and cover them with water and boil.

Then strain, sweeten, and allow juice to come to a boil again, then bottle for use for punch, sherbets, etc.

Cherry Dumplings

Make rich baking powder biscuit dough. Roll thin, cut round, put spoonful of cherries in center and pinch dough together. In bottom of baking dish mix well one cup sugar and one teaspoonful corn starch. Put dumplings in well apart and bits of butter on each dumpling. Add boiling water enough to cover well and bake in hot oven. Serve with sauce left in dish when dumplings are taken out, adding a few more cherries.

Natural Inference.

The two women had just been introduced.
"My husband and I," said the one,
"have been married nearly 10 years and we have never had a quarrel."
"That's too bad," rejoined the other.
"Any woman deserted at the altar has my sympathy."

"I don't see why you are dismissing me," said his chauffeur, angrily.
"Didn't I take you out in your car

"Yes," answered the owner, "but you wouldn't take me where I wanted to go."

No Slang for Him.

Donald had been to Sunday school and on coming home was asked what he had learned. The lesson was the story of Joseph, and the small learner was evidently very full of his subject.

"Oh," he said, "it was about a boy, and his brothers took him and put him in a hole in the ground; and then killed another boy, and took the first boy's coat and dipped it in the blood of this boy and—"

"Oh, no, Donald, not another boy!" his sister interrupted, horrified. But Donald stood his ground.
"It was, too," he insisted. Then he added, "The teacher said 'kild' but I don't use words like that."

W. S. Gilbert was lunching once at a country hotel, when he found himself in company with three cycling clergymen, by whom he was drawn into conversation. When they discovered who he was, one of the party asked Mr. Gilbert how he felt "in such a grave and reverend company."

"I feel," said Mr. Gilbert, "like a lion in a den of Daniels."

"I wonder why so many business

BEGGAR ENEMY TO TRUE CHARITY

THIS is written in Italy, a country that is full of beggars. To be sure, there are not so many as used to be, before the present government took hold of things. The authorities now are doing what they can to abate the nuisance; but it is difficult to stop what has been a custom of centuries and what has even been commended as a pious thing.

Of all the creatures that infest the social system, perhaps the beggar is the most despicable. And that for the simple reason that he is doing his best to destroy charity. The altruistic impulse is the noblest in the human heart. To strengthen and develop it is to advance the happiness and peace of the race. The institution of begging tends to cut the nerve of altruism. It substitutes pity to a means of livelihood.

Begging is not bad because it costs so much; it is bad because it prevents society from paying the much greater debt it owes. People become satisfied, and think they have done their duty when they hand a few pennies to the wretched old woman in rags at the church door; whereas, as a matter of fact, their duty is to pay many dollars to schools, hospitals, and the like for the purpose of preventing ignorance and suffering.

I have had quite a struggle to screw my courage up to the point where I make it a rule never to give a cent to the professional beggar. But I have succeeded. And I think I am more just and more kind for it. Also more liberal; for the moral pang has made me seek out honest and straight institutions which are doing worthy eleemosynary work and do give them ten times what the beggar tipping would have cost.

Those who really care for their fellow-men should refrain from encouraging beggary in any way, for the reason that no business is so debasing to the character of the one who follows it. A beggar must cringe and grovel and demean himself before his fellowmen. He literally sells his soul to contempt. He deprives himself of every manly, self-respecting quality.

I am aware of the precepts of the Bible about charity. I know the command, "Give to him that asketh of thee." "Sell all thou hast and give to the poor," and the like, as well as the theorem, "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord," but it all depends on how one reads the Bible.

It should not be construed literally. The book itself says: "The letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive." Especially is this true when a literal compliance with a precept plainly defeats the object which the giver of the precept had in mind.

The admonitions of religion should be mixed by us with all the intelligence and common sense we possess. Now, while in the days of Christ, in the middle ages, and in all the eras previous to this age of popular government, it may have helped cure the hurt of poverty to bestow alms indiscriminately, it is most certain that such action in this day of the world increases poverty, debauches souls, ruins character, and tends to prolong iniquitous and unjust social conditions.

There were no public hospitals for the sick, no blind asylums, no deaf and dumb institutions, no places to care for the insane and feeble minded, and no public employment offices were in existence in the age when the New Testament was written. Before our era there were no public schools, neither were there legislatures for the redress of public grievances.

All these modern institutions do by system and intelligent order, and hence do a thousand times better, the work of humane help toward the unfortunate. My first duty, therefore, if I want really to be a humane and kind man is to pay my just taxes to the government. The man who dodges his taxes and does out so-called charity to the poor is a swindler. It is as if he gave the poor a loaf of bread and destroyed their bakery. He gives where it can be seen and noted, or at least where he can feel it directly, and withholds where it cannot be seen and where he can feel only through his reason.

No greater and more genuinely charitable institution ever existed since the foundation of the world than an American state. Think of the millions of children in the public schools equipping themselves for self-support, and of the thousands in the various asylums and hospitals shielded from suffering and shame and neglect, and all at the expense of the state!

I took askance upon every private endowment. Nothing is good through and through that is done for a people that is not done by the people themselves. I believe the state today is doing more real eleemosynary work than all her churches, benevolent private organizations and generous millionaires put together. I hear no hard words for Carnegie and Rockefeller or others who have endowed colleges, libraries, hospitals, and the like; but I cannot help thinking that the time will come when the millionaire who has found himself in possession of more money than he can use will turn it back to the people whence he got it.

Another means of true charity is to furnish employment and to treat employees like human beings. I believe a man like the late Marshall Field, like my friend Milton Wilson, who sells men's furnishings throughout the world; like my other friend, Paul Fredemann of Limbach, in Saxony, whose underwear factory is a model of humane contrivance for the welfare of his workers, or like any one of a hundred others I might mention who gives honest work to a fair chance to earn a competence and not sacrifice their self-respect, is doing infinitely more good than the medieval saints who gave bread and pennies to the beggars, or than the traditional English Lady Bountiful who goes about among her underpaid tenants distributing cakes and jellies.

What right minded and right hearted people want is not a chance to grab but a chance to earn. Give a man justice and you give him the noblest charity.

Give a man opportunity and you help him without breaking down his self-respect.

Give a man work and fair pay for it and you give him something with out at the same time robbing him of that sense of manhood and usefulness which is "the immediate jewel of the soul."

It's The Old Man Who Falls

CONSIDER the young man of the better class. He is busy with his crop of oats, the harvesting of which, in the opinion of his seniors who did likewise, spells disgrace, ruin, ignominy.

But how often do you hear of this young man making a defalcation? How many of his class are in prison? Put your finger on such a young man who has murdered and who has died on the scaffold or in the chair, or has been imprisoned for life.

He has played the game fast. He has lighted both ends of the candle and when it burned to the middle he has renewed the experiment.

He has wooed, never intending to make his wooing good. He has even broken hearts, devilishness, and then broken hearts, devilishness, with deliberation—approximating devilishness, and then soaked himself with intoxicants that ravaged his body and paralyzed his brain.

But at the last moment, on the verge of the precipice, something challenged him and he recovered—in the nick of time. But he didn't rob. He didn't murder. He turned when despair pointed to the last notch on the dial, and from that second he recovered himself.

On the crumbling ruins of misapplied years he bulled well and substantially. For every day of dissipation and reckless plunging he put in hours of restitution.

For every sputtering candle he had clutched day and night he lighted a lamp that cast its gleams forward on a path that led to flowery beds and shaded nooks into a great open road where opportunity stood with a reward.

Did he forget, later? Did he stumble in the afternoon and finally go down in a cloud?

Sometimes, yes. But it was in the time when others who had warned him went down.

Why? The question is unanswered. Ruin came to the intelligent man after he failed to profit by experience, after he had failed to walk around the shattered and hopeless wrecks that went to pieces after they had neglected to follow Opportunity.

When the man who was born in the spirit of uplift has become a great light he turns aside. He steals, he is led by an avaricious spirit, and stumbling at last, he dashes into outer darkness. But the young man in his day recoups and takes his place splendidly in the contest.

Away to the War; Or, Inconsistency

Long the lady looked at the like ness.

A big shiny tear rolled out of the eye that is nearest you in the illustration, executed an improper but amusing waltz dance on the tip of the fat girl's retreating nose and crashed to the floor with a dull but not sickening thud.

He had gone away to the war, Perchance to get killed. Perchance to get the top of his dear head blown off. Perchance to get it all blown off.

Another tear, larger, if anything, than the first, but on the other side, and hence invisible in the illustration, splashed gently on the oriental rug against which the beautiful creature was leaning. Ah, why had he not heeded her and remained at home?

He had gone away to the war! But, ah! There is a well-known foot-step or two, and HE is with her. "I have hired a substitute!" he exclaims aloud.

Indignantly the maiden stooped and searched for her two tears.

"Coward!" she hissed.

The Scrap Book

Saving Fifty.

Joseph E. G. Ryan, the Chicago story teller, was on a train going across the continent that was held up near Reno, Nev. He says: "When the robbers came in the front end of the car, wearing masks and commanding everybody to shell out, I noticed two drummers, who sat at the far end of the car. They had opposite seats. As the robbers came down the center of the car and all the passengers obligingly shellingly shelled out the two drummers became very much excited. One of them tried to stuff his money in his shoe. A robber saw him and harshly commanded him to stop it. Just before the robbers reached the drummers one of them dug into his pocket, pulled out a roll of bills, peeled off three or four and, reaching over quickly, thrust them into the hand of his friend across the aisle, saying hoarsely, "Here, old man; here's the fifty I owe you."—Saturday Evening Post.

Out In the Fields With God.

The little cares that fretted me,
I lost them yesterday
Among the fields, above the sea,
Among the winds at play.
Among the lowing of the herds,
The rustling of the trees,
Among the singing of the birds,
The humming of the bees.

The foolish fears of what may happen,
I cast them all away
Among the clover-scented grass,
Among the new moon's rays,
Among the husking of the corn,
Where drowsy poppies nod,
Where ill thoughts die and good are born,
Out in the fields with God.

—Elizabeth Barrett Browning

Fine, but Sultry.

An old Sooty who was in the habit of calling each evening at the village inn for a "drap o' the best" found the landlord one night putting a shine on the taps. After a few remarks about the weather he received his nightly dram.

After he had gone the landlord discovered, to his horror, that he had supplied Don-aid with a half gill out of the bottle of sulphuric acid which he had been using for cleaning the taps.

"I THAD WAN FAULT," Every moment he expected to hear of old Donald's death, and his relief was great when the old worthy arrived next evening.

"Don-aid, what did you think o' the whusky ye got last night?" "It was a fine dram, a good, warming dram," said Donald, tenderly caressing his straggling beard, "but it had wan fault, Every time I coughed it set fire to ma whuskers."

HER

Sonny came to grandfather Dan, holding an old-fashioned gold locket in his hand—a locket curiously dentured by a bullet.

"Did it save your life, grandfather?" he asked. "Why have you never told me about it before?"

Grandfather Dan took the locket and turned it slowly over in his trembling hand. "It belonged to Dave," he said, and then sat silently gazing at the distant hills. Sonny, too, was quiet, for Dave had been grandfather's dearly loved brother and comrade in arms, whom he could never talk about without great sorrow. Dave had died in Dan's arms, shot in the very first skirmish the young soldiers had entered.

"Go to my strong-box," said grandfather, at length, giving Sonny a key, "and bring to me the package in the lower left hand corner." Sonny hastened to obey and returned with a tiny packet wrapped in a bit of bunting.

"Tis Dave's secret," said grandfather, "that I am going to tell you, for the locket will belong to you some day—soon—and you shall know about it."

"When Dave was shot, as you have often heard, I, beside him, caught him in my arms, and managed to drag him to shelter, although I, too, was hurt. You know all about it, except that I have never told you about 'Her.'" Sonny nodded. "Dave was always a favorite," continued grandfather, "and when we were marching South, the boys all used to tease him, but not knowing just which one of all the girls we left behind was Dave's sweetheart, we used to ask him about 'Her'—just her—not knowing any name. We all had farewell letters, but no one knew about Dave's."

"Well, when Dave lay dying," his voice broke for a moment, but he soon went on—"he smiled at me, in all his pain, and whispered, 'Her picture is in the locket. Take it home to her, and tell her that I always loved her.'" There was another silence, while grandfather gazed at the locket. Sonny dared not interrupt, but he handed the little package to grandfather, who carefully opened it. In it were three old, yellow letters, scarcely legible.

"Read them, Sonny," said grandfather, and Sonny read.

"My Dear Dave," said the first, "you should not have been so worried about our parting. I shall be safe and well cared for while you are gone. It will be rather dull, with so many of our young men away, but I shall pay a visit to my cousin in the city for diversion, and I shall have a new gown to delight you when you return to your very loving Laura."

The second was shorter.

"Dear David," it said, "God be with you—that is what good-by means. I know that he will protect you and bring you safe home again to me. My prayers are ever with you. Trustingly yours, "Emily."

There was another letter, not so carefully written, incorrectly spelled, and unsigned.

"Dear," said the third letter, "the love of a girl like me can never be a blessing—but, now that you are going away, I will confess. I love you dearly, David, dearly, and I want you to be happy. If I could only make you so—but you have money and education, and I have neither. Only a great love for you, David."

Those were all the letters. Sonny folded them carefully again and wrapped them in the flag—the farewell letters of a soldier.

"They tell so little, and so much," said grandfather. "Emily was the daughter of our pastor, a sweet and lovely girl, whom everyone honored. She died, unmarried, two years after the war was over. Laura was the village coquette—the prettiest, most fascinating little lady imaginable, but she thought always of herself, as even that bit of a letter shows. The other was the saddest of them all—a poor country girl, to whom David had been kind and courteous as he always was to all. Indeed, he had shown no special attention to any one of the three. And yet, he loved one of them."

"Which one?" asked Sonny. "To which one did the locket belong?" The boy tried hard in his own mind to determine which had won the soldier's heart. The old man shook his head and said nothing. "Grandfather," whispered Sonny, "won't you please tell me which one?" Grandfather sighed. "When I found the locket, hit by a bullet, as you see, the picture was gone. I have never known which one was 'Her,'" he said.

Pray to Pigs.

The native of Borneo prays to a pig on all important occasions. If he fears enemies, ill luck or sickness is coming the pig is brought into the hut with its legs tied together. A lighted brand is applied to scotch it slightly, then the pig is asked about the matter which the natives want to know.

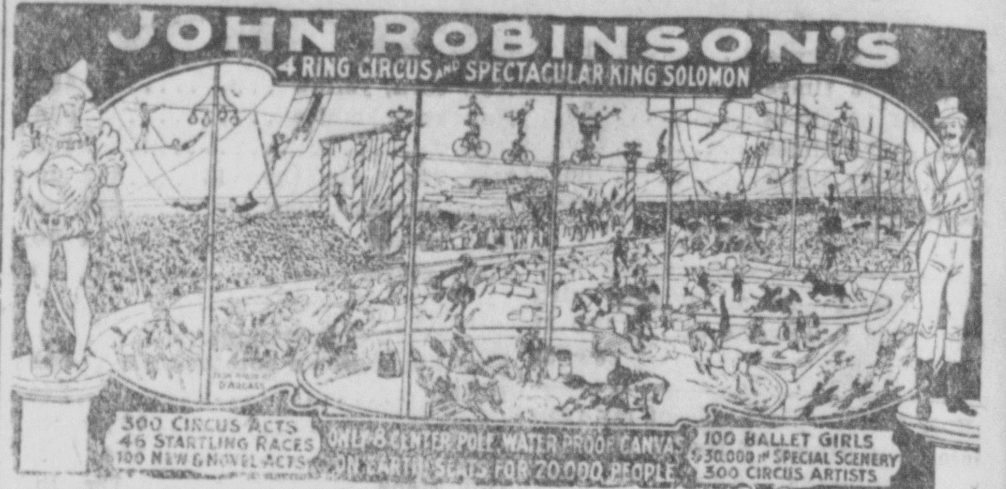

Robin Superstition.

"It is unlucky to kill a robin" is a well-established saying in England. "How badly your hand shakes; you can scarcely write," said a teacher to a boy in school in England. "It always shakes," said the boy. "I once had a robin die in my hand and they say if a robin dies in your hand it will always shake."
